Key aspects you should know about health insurance.

What is Health Insurance?

1.

Health insurance compensates for medical expenses incurred as a result of accident, illness or hospitalization including hospital charges. It is an agreement signed between an Insurance Company and an individual or group of persons. In general, this compensation is on a reimbursement basis with a maximum benefit limit. The standard insurance period for health insurance is one year, however, it may vary when integrated with life insurance.

Why is Health Insurance important?

Health insurance serves as a risk transferring tool that allows individuals to transfer some of their medical expenses to an insurer, giving them more choices for medication and treatment. Depending on the nature of the insurance policy, and the terms and conditions it covers the cost of treatments for prevention of diseases, regular medical testing, and related hospital charges. Additionally, health insurance can extend protection to your family or individuals employed under you.

What elements/factors are covered by Health Insurance Policies available in the market?

3.

Health insurance policies in Sri Lanka generally provide cashless claims payments or reimburse medical expenses incurred as a result of accidents, illness, or hospitalization, subject to the value and the stipulated terms and conditions of the policy.

Also, the health insurance policies stipulate a 'waiting period', during which certain illnesses/medical expenses will not be covered by the policy.

How can you select the insurance coverage, which best suits your requirements?

You can choose the insurance coverage that best suits your requirements and avoid unnecessary expenses on the insurance coverages that are not suitable by thoroughly studying the available coverages in the market. You can get the assistance of a qualified Insurance Agent/ Advisor or Insurance Brokering Company and select the health insurance that aligns with the premium you can afford. Further, when purchasing a critical illness cover under a health insurance policy, it is advisable to carefully read and understand what is covered and excluded before making a decision.

What happens if you have “pre-existing conditions”?

Pre-existing conditions are illnesses that existed before purchasing a health insurance policy. These conditions should be clearly disclosed when purchasing a health insurance policy. Insurance companies generally do not cover expenses related to such pre-existing illnesses. However, depending on the nature of the insurance policy, and the terms and conditions, some insurance companies may provide coverage for pre-existing conditions after a certain period of time.

What Factors should be considered when determining a Health Insurance?

Health insurance premiums generally increase with age, as older people are more likely to face health issues. Therefore, the age of the insured person is a main factor in determining the premium. Further, historical health records of the insured person and family members play a significant role in determining the premium. Previous claims experience is also considered, if there is no history of disease, the premium is significantly lower. The number of claim free years is another important factor in determining the premium. During policy renewal, the number of claim-free years becomes important, and some insurance companies may agree to reduce the premium based on their policies and the nature of the coverage obtained.

Is there a minimum period of hospitalization required to obtain compensation under Health Insurance?

7.

The insurance policy stipulates that a person must be hospitalized for a minimum of 24 hours to be eligible for compensation. However, this requirement does not apply to accidents and certain treatments. Therefore, it is important to understand the conditions related to the minimum period of hospitalization by carefully reading the insurance coverage.
